Was Former Head Of Vast Movie Empire Built On Penny Arcade

William Fox, seventy-three, film producer who once controlled a movie empire valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars, died in New York at Doctors Hospital. His home was Foxhall, at Woodmere, L. I., where he lived in retirement after seeing his fortunes crumble with the 1929 market crash.

Mr. Fox's rags-to-riches career was such that in his movie-making days he himself might have rejected it as too fantastic for plot material, says the New York Herald Tribune. An immigrant boy, he began his business life selling newspapers, advanced to peddling shoe polish made by his father in the family kitchen and was a garment sponger in an East Side sweat-shop when he began to save the money that laid the foundation for the Fox fortune.

He was able to scrape together enough money—$600—to buy the small garment shop which he quickly sold for $1,800. With this, he bought an interest in a penny arcade at 700 Broadway, in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, and began to show motion pictures.

That was in 1906 and less than twenty years later he was head of the Fox Film Corp., the Fox Theater Corp. and the West Coast Theaters Corp. On paper these enterprises were valued at more than $300,000,000. The Fox interests controlled 450 theaters. His personal fortune was estimated at $35,000,000. He was said to have carried $5,400,000 in life insurance and had given an estimated $5,000,000 to charities.

But Mr. Fox was unable to weather the financial storms of 1929 and from then on he was embroiled in lawsuits and bankruptcy proceedings. He had filed a petition for bankruptcy at Atlantic City in 1936, listing liabilities of $9,935,261 and assets of $100.

Then, at sixty-three, he served a term in Federal prison on charges of conspiring to obstruct justice and defraud the government.

William Fox was born January 1, 1879, in Tushva, Hungary, the son of Michael and Anna Fox, who brought him to the United States when he was an infant.

His Williamsburg penny arcade, with the added attraction of movies, made $250,000 for Mr. Fox in five years. By that time he had twenty theaters in operation. In 1908 he took over the Dewey Theater on 14th Street and the Gotham on 125th Street, both of them owned by "Big Tim" Sullivan, of Tammany Hall. He gave the entertainment world the first of many jolts when he acquired the Academy of Music on 14th St. at a $100,000 rental, according to the Herald Tribune.

Mr. Fox began producing his own films in 1913 when Fox Film Corp. was formed. Its first productions were turned out at the Eclair Studio, Fort Lee, N. J. Later films were made at Scott's Farm on Staten Island and on vacant lots in Jersey City.

The first Fox film was "Life's Shopwindow" directed by J. Gordon Edwards and starring Claire Whitney and Stuart Holmes. Among other early productions was "A Fool There Was," which starred Theda Bara, first of the film vampires, and caused a sensation. Annette Kellermann starred in "The Daughter of the Gods," produced at the unheard-of expense of $700,000. William Farnum was the star of "A Tale of Two Cities." Other notable Fox productions were "Cleopatra," [illegible]. Over the [illegible] on Broadway. "What Price Glory" was a hit in most of the world's capitals.

In 1916 Mr. Fox opened his first Hollywood studio and three years later built a $2,500,000 office building and studio at Tenth Avenue and 55th Street, New York. Fox Theater Corp. bought the Roxy Theater in 1926 and a year later acquired control of West Coast Theaters, Inc., a 250-house chain. Purchase of Loew's, Inc., brought 450 theaters under Fox control at a cost of about $44,000,000.

In the spring of 1930, Mr. Fox sold for a reported $18,000,000 his controlling interest in the vast Fox motion-picture production, distribution and theatre holdings in the U.S., and abroad.

When talking pictures became a reality, Mr. Fox, like the Warner Brothers, lost no time in exploiting the possibilities. Talking pictures proved Mr. Fox's undoing. The cost of equipping his houses brought on financial difficulties from which he was unable to extricate himself. For six years Mr. Fox was involved in constant litigation.

After he went into bankruptcy in 1936 claims totalling $55,000,000 were advanced, many arising from the disputed ownership of the All-Continent Corp., a Delaware corporation licensed under the name of Mr. Fox's wife, Eva, and their two daughters, Mona and Belle. It was alleged that All-Continent belonged, in reality, to Mr. Fox and that its assets should be declared his, says the New York Herald Tribune. Settlements against the corporation brought about Mr. Fox's discharge from bankruptcy in 1942.

But the hardest blow was yet to fall. He was indicted in Philadelphia with J. Warren Davis, a retired Circuit Court judge, and Morgan S. Kaufman, former assistant Pennsylvania bankruptcy referee, on charges that he sought to obtain favorable court decisions in the bankruptcy litigations. Mr. Fox pleaded guilty. In two trials, juries could not agree on the charges against Judge Davis and Mr. Kaufman, but Mr. Fox was sentenced to serve a year and a day in prison.

In 1944, he sought again to re-enter the film field in which he had played such an important role in an earlier period, but without any apparent success. Four years later, he offered as a public service a documentary film on the Sister Kenny concept of polio. The film was shown at Town Hall.

On his twenty-first birthday, January 1, 1900, Mr. Fox married Miss Eva Leo. She survives, as do their two daughters. Also surviving are three sisters, Mrs. [illegible] Fried, Mrs. Herman [illegible] and Miss Melvina Fox, and two brothers, Aaron and Manfred Fox.

Tells Israelis To Be Active In Hot Climate

A report tending to explode popular myths about life in hot climates was read by Prof. W. S. S. Ladell of the Climate Physiological Research unit near Lagos in Nigeria before the United Nations Economic, Social and Cultural Organization's symposium on desert research in Jerusalem and has stirred widespread interest among Israelis.

Among Jews bent upon establishing a European-type state in the Middle East there has for decades been a standing debate as to whether they should follow European schedules for work and rest or copy the Arabs who are accustomed to an afternoon siesta and generally take life easy.

Professor Ladell advised them to keep European habits. Europeans temporally resident in tropics, he said, are often better able to stand severe heat than local inhabitants because the Europeans are more active. They play strenuous games that the natives consider folly and expose themselves

To Widen Unique Health Plan

Success in the first year's operation of an unusual project to maintain family health has encouraged the Community Service Society of New York to expand so that next year there are expected to be nearly 1,000 persons under observation.

Dr. Martin Cherkasky, director of Montefiore Hospital, reported at a dinner of the society in the Roosevelt Hotel that the family health maintenance demonstration, "the first experiment of its kind in American medical history," would have to run for at least five years before substantial results could be obtained, says the New York Times.

Twenty families were taken on for study within the last twelve months, he said. This pilot scheme has warranted the enlistment of more, probably 100 families by the end of this year and between 200 and 300 some time next year, with an average of four individuals for the family.

The project is being handled jointly by the Community Service Society, Montefiore Hospital and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. Its purpose is to show families how to keep well.

"We found in our original group of families that where the families had children or were about to have them, an overwhelming percentage were willing, even anxious, to become part of this demonstration," Dr. Cherkasky said. "It was presented to them as being what it is, an experiment in which they were participants in the fullest sense in that their needs would to a large [illegible] the directions [illegible]

Urges Aid To Resolve Group Tensions

Jacob Blaustein, president of the American Jewish Committee, called on the American people and American organizations to encourage and activate democratic forces within Germany to counteract "German reaction, chauvinism and racialism." Speaking before 100 American Jewish communal leaders at the semi-annual meeting of his organization's executive committee in New York, at the Savoy-Plaza, Mr. Blaustein called attention to the special skills developed by American organizations in the community relations field. He held that such organizations had "unique responsibility for encouraging Germany to undertake a comprehensive program of education for better democratic living and for solving intergroup problems."

In listing the Near East as an example where peace and democracy were confronted with the threats of injustice and hatred as well as totalitarian communism, Mr. Blaustein declared that "it is in the obvious interest of the United States and the cause of democracy throughout the world that peace and stability should be achieved" in that part of the world. He said that the United States must concern herself with arranging a meeting between Israeli and Arab leaders, according to the New York Times.

Asserting that social scientists could assist in solving the problems of hatreds and antagonisms in Germany and the Middle East, Mr. Blaustein said that "for this reason, social scientists now exploring such problems as group bigotry, hatred and group tensions should have the same strong support as that given to the physicists who fissioned the atom."

Community relations agencies, Mr. Blaustein held, constitute "bulwarks for the American people in this critical era against the confusions, fears and suspicions generated between man and man and group and group by the unscrupulous demagogues who are quick to exploit these times of stress and tension."

Mr. Blaustein declared such agencies helped to resolve "tensions among the various racial, religious and ethnic groups of the American population" and "to im-

Einstein Helps School Girl Of 15 With Geometry Problem

Dr. Albert Einstein, the mathematical wizard, took time out from investigating the mysteries of the universe early in May to help a 15-year-old Los Angeles girl 3,000 miles away with her plane geometry course.

Confronted with a problem that neither she nor her classmates could solve, Johanna Mankiewicz, daughter of Herman Mankiewicz, Hollywood film writer, wrote the 73-year-old theoretical physicist at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N. J., beseeching his assistance. She reminded him that he had known her grandfather, the late Dr. Frank Mankiewicz, Professor of Education at the College of the City of New York.

By return mail, Dr. Einstein sent her a diagram of the problem, sketched on the back of her letter, indicating the method of solution, although not giving the explicit answer, says the New York Times.

He signed the diagram "A. E." without further comment.

"Dear Professor Einstein:

"Our geometry class here at Westlake School for Girls found itself completely at a loss today when no one in the class could do a certain problem.

"I realize that you are a very busy man, but you are the only person we know of who could supply us with the answer and let us keep ourselves busy at our other business.

"So, if you could possibly work this problem for us, we would be very grateful. This is the problem:

"The common external tangent of twotangent circles of radii 8 inches and 2 inches is ———.

"I think you will agree it is the hardest thing!

"Very respectfully yours,

"Johanna Mankiewicz (secretary of the sophomore class, Westlake School).

"P. S. I think you knew my grandfather, Professor Frank Mankiewicz of C. C. N. Y."

Dr. Einstein indicated in his sketch how the length of the tangent could be established through the Pythagorean theorem (the square of the hypotenuse of a right triangle is equal to the sum of the squares of the sides) by plot-

EINSTEIN
ting the tangent with the two differing radii in a triangle that "can be easily constructed."

"This," he added laconically, "gives the solution."

Johanna said that while she did not recall exactly what length the tangent had turned out to be, her teacher had duly ratified Dr. Einstein's solution.

Although details of Dr. Einstein's diagram and equation were somewhat obscure to observers by following approximately, the method outlined they arrived at the correct answer for the length of the tangent: eight inches.

(According to mathematicians, Professor Einstein's drawing was a simple diagram to indicate how the solution may be attained. The two circles should have been drawn as though they were touching.)

For mathematicians: the tangent is a projection of the third side of a right triangle whose ten-inch hypotenuse is the line connecting the centers of the two circles, and whose six-inch base is a radius of the large circle less the projected radius of the small circle.

Incidentally, Johanna disclosed, the scientist, true to his propensity for annihilating space, had managed to send his reply by air mail with only a 3-cent stamp, says the New York Times.

Medicoff, Van Horne Avenue, whose marriage takes place on October 19, at Beth Abraham Synagogue, was entertained at a tea at Ruby Foo's, in celebration of her engagement. The hostesses, Mrs. A. Arick, mother, and Mrs. M. Shedlack, Van Horne Avenue, grandmother of the bride-elect, received eighty-five guests. • They're really ritzy — and no trouble at all to make, with new Fleischmann's Fast Rising Dry Yeast! Gives you fast action — light doughs — and none of the bother of old time perishable yeast! Get a dozen packages — keeps full strength without refrigeration!

CRUSTY DINNER ROLLS

• Measure into a large bowl ½ c. lukewarm water, 1 tsp. granulated sugar; stir until sugar is dissolved. Sprinkle with 1 envelope Fleischmann's Fast Rising Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 mins., THEN stir well.

Add ½ c. lukewarm water and 1 tsp salt. Add, all at once, 3½ c. once-sifted bread flour and work in with the hands; work in 3 tbs. soft shortening. Knead on lightly-floured board until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl. Cover with a damp cloth and set in warm place, free from draught. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down dough in bowl, fold over, cover and again let rise until doubled in bulk. Turn out on lightly-floured board and divide into 2 equal portions; shape each piece into a long roll about 1½" in diameter. Cover with a damp cloth and let rest 15 mins. Using a floured sharp knife, cut dough into 2" lengths and place, well apart, on ungreased cookie sheets. Sprinkle rolls with cornmeal and let rise, uncovered, for ½ hour. Brush with cold water and let rise another ½ hour. Meanwhile, stand a broad shallow pan of hot water in the oven and preheat oven to hot, 425°. Remove pan of water from oven and bake the rolls in steam-filled oven for ½ hour, brushing them with cold water and sprinkling lightly with cornmeal after the first 15 mins., and again brushing them with cold water 2 minutes before removing baked buns from the oven. Yield — 18 rolls.

to the climate. As a result, he explained European's body mechanisms adjust themselves to heat more fully than do the natives who seek relief in inactivity.

Professor Ladell opposed an afternoon siesta on the theory that sleep during hot hours was not really restful and prevented a full quota of sleep in the cool of the night when it would do more good, says the New York Times. He added that while it was necessary to drink liquids in hot climates Europeans often harmed themselves by overindulgence in alcohol.

He characterized as "myths" that "cold climate man" was superior to "warm climate man," that the white man could not keep healthy in hot countries and that prolonged residence in hot climates produced debility in Europeans.

Observing that great Mesopotamian and Mediterranean civilizations of past had shown that man could live successfully and develop fruitful culture in countries that were often stigmatised as "hot," Professor Ladell predicted that the development of Israel as a "modern state culturally and technically equal to any Western state" would bear him out.

The Life Story Of Rabbi Akiba

Text: Rabbi Akiba said: "Beloved is man for he was created in the image of God. Beloved our Israel for they are children of God." (Ethics of the Fathers)

One of the greatest of talmudic teachers was Rabbi Akiba. As in the case of many great popular figures, his life has been embellished by many legends. In all probability, Rabbi Akiba was born about the year 50, of the common era, near Lydda, Palestine. He belonged to the Am-Ha-Aretz class. By occupation he was a shepherd and as such he found employment with Kalba Sabua, one of the richest philanthropists in the City of Jerusalem. Rachel, the beautiful daughter of Kalba Sabua, was drawn to Akiba by his innate refinement. Akiba, of course loved Rachel.

In the case of these two, we have one of the most beautiful of romances recorded in sacred writing. Rachel made Akiba promise that he would study and enter the Beth Hamidrash. They were secretly married. Rachel's father disinherited the daughter because he refused to have an ignorant son-in-law. Bitter poverty for both Akiba and Rathel followed. They had to live in a miserable hovel but both continued to struggle and sacrifice for education.

Akiba often meditated on the problem of whether he could master the intricate subtleties of talmud. He reflected as he observed water, continually dropping upon hard stone, that these drops hollow the stone. Even so the words of the Torah, when permitted to fall constantly upon one's heart and mind, can easily impress themselves and make the individual learned in the law. And so Akiba was encouraged to continue study for twelve years in the Academy at Jerusalem. The remarkable renunciation on the part of Rachel during these years indicates the influence for good which a good wife may have upon a husband. Indeed, no sacrifice and no self-abnegation was too great for Rachel during these twelve long years.

Akiba rose to fame. The student became the master of rabbinic law, and the very head of the Academy itself. When he returned home, followed by a multitude of disciples and his beloved Rachel came to meet him, he proclaimed to all that his knowledge of the Torah which he had acquired was due to his beloved helpmate. Soon too, Kalba Sabua, the father of Rachel, came to seek guidance from this great teacher and discovered that the intellectual luminary was his own son-in-law. Of course, reconciliation took place.

Akiba ben Joseph is considered the third founder of Judaism after Moses and Ezra. He was the first to arrange and systematize the oral law. He gave logical foundation for each Halacha. He developed a new method of exigesis. In a world of paganism and decadent Greek philosophy, he was the great defender of Judaism. In his ethics and philosophy, he ever emphasized that labour is most honorable to man and warned his followers that it is as equally wrong to deceive a heathen as it a Jew. He pronounced, like unto Hillel, that the greatest doctrine of the Torah was "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Akiba was known especially for his humility. He would visit with his sick students and minister unto them at all times. He was a man of the people and in spite of fame was a modest person. He gave the following advice: "Take thou a seat a few places below thy rank until thou art bidden to take a higher place. For it is better that they should say to thee 'come up higher' than they should bid thee go down lower."

Akiba likewise was famous for his kindness and charity. His heart was full of affection for the poor masses and he was ever interested in their welfare. He was called "hand of the poor". He travelled far and wide collecting funds for the needy and also as an ambassador of his people. He no doubt was a great "public relations" man and rendered great service in interpreting Jew and Judaism to the non-Jewish world. He was enjoined by a number of other Rabbis to go to Rome and plead with the Roman authorities for the relaxing of restrictions placed by the occupying power upon the Jews of Palestine. For then the Temple was in ruins and Rome was master in the Holy Land.

We are deeply touched by the fervent patriotism of this great humanitarian. He especially loved the Jewish people and Eretz Israel. He knew well that there could never be internationalism without genuine nationalism. Thus Akiba zealously and passionately gave all of his strength toward the rebuilding of Zion as the national home of his people. His spirit inspired the last great rebellion against Rome under the leadership of Bar-Kochba.

The Emperor Hadrian broke faith with the Jewish people. He promised them originally to rebuild the Temple. Instead he began to build a sanctuary dedicated to the worship of paganism. Hadrian instituted systematic persecution, prohibiting Jews from observing the Sabbath, from the rite of ordination of disciples, and prohibiting the study of Torah.

Rabbi Akiba, possessed of great moral courage, dared to defy the Roman military authorities and gathered his disciples in catacombs for the study of the law, for he knew that a Torahless Israel is an Israel that could easily be destroyed. Alas, Akiba and his colleagues were captured and imprisoned and he was condemned to death. His crime was that he dared to continue to teach Torah in spite of an imperial decree.

When they led Akiba to execution it was the hour of the reading of the Shema. Rufus, the Roman governor of Palestine, caused the skin of Akiba to be torn off with hot irons, but Akiba directed his heart to God and recited the Shema Yisroel with a peaceful smile on his face. Rufus, astonished at Akiba's insensibility to pain, asked him whether he was a sorcerer. "I am no sorcerer", replied Akiba. "All the days of my life I have grieved that I could not carry out the Commandment, 'Thou shalt love God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy might, even unto death.' But now I am able to fulfill it, shall I not rejoice? And with the last syllable of the Shema, Akiba expired. His career was an inspiration to Jews and non-Jews. His life was glorious. Glorious, too, was the death of this great martyr, Rabbi Akiba.
